Me thought all his ſenſes were lockt in his eye,
As Iewels in Chriſtall for ſome Prince to buy. (glaſt,
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were
Did point out to buy them along as you paſt.
His faces owne margent did quote ſuch amazes,
That all eyes ſaw his eyes inchanted with gazes.
Ile giue you Aquitaine, all that is his,
And you giue him for my ſake, but one louing Kiſſe,

Prin. Come to our pauillion, Boyet is diſpoſde.

Bro. But to ſpeake that in words, which his eye hath diſcloſ'd.
I onely haue made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue, which I know will not lie.

Lad.Ro. Thou art an old Loue-monger, and ſpeakeſt skilfully.

Lad. Ma. He is Cupids Grandfather, and learnes newes of him.

Lad. 2. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boy. Do you heare my mad Wenches?

*Lad.*1. No.

Boy. What then, do you ſee?

*Lad.*2. I, our way to be gone.

Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Braggart and Boy.

Song.

Bra. Warble child, make paſſionate my ſenſe of hearing.

Boy. Concolinel.

Brag. Sweet ayre, go tenderneſſe of yeeres: take this Key, giue enlargement to the ſwaine, bring him feſtinately hither: I muſt imploy him in a letter to my Loue.

Boy. Will you win your loue with a French braule?

Bra. How meaneſt thou brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat maſter, but to iigge off a tune at the tongues tongues end, canarie to it with th ning vp your eye: ſigh a note and the throate: if you ſwallowed loue through: noſe as if you ſnuft vp lou hat penthouſe-like ore the ſhop o croſt on your thinbellie doublet, li hands in your pocket, like a man keepe not too long in one tune, bu complements, theſe are humours that would be betrayed without th note: do you note men that moſt ar

Brag. How haſt thou purchas'd

Boy. By my pen of obſeruation.

Brag. But O, but O.

Boy. The Hobbie-horſe is forgo

Bra. Cal'ſt thou my loue Hobbi

Boy. No Maſter the Hobbie-h Loue perhaps a Hacknie:
But haue you forgot your Loue?

Brag. Almoſt I had.

Boy. Negligent ſtudent, learne h

Brag. By heart, and in heart Bo

Boy. And out of heart Maſter: a

Brag. What wilt thou proue?

Boy. A man, if I liue (and this) the inſtant: by heart you loue her come by her: in heart you loue her,
with her: and out of heart you lou you cannot enioy her.

Brag. I am all theſe three.

Boy. And three times as much n

Boy. Fetch hither the Swaine h

Boy. A meſſage well ſympathis' for an Aſſe.

Brag. Ha, ha, What ſaiſt thou?

Boy. Marrie ſir, you muſt ſend
he is verie ſlow gated: but I goe,

Brag. The way is but ſhort, away

Boy. As ſwift as lead ſir.